Forest Service considers Maroon Lake bike fee

Published 6:23 am, Thursday, June 6, 2013

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service is being urged to charge a fee for cyclists riding to Maroon Lake.

The recommendation came Wednesday from a volunteer committee that advises the regional forester on national forest issues. Janelle Kukuk told foresters if cyclists use the same facilities as motorists at Maroon Lake, they also should pay a fee.

According to the Aspen Times (http://tinyurl.com/mwpxu6d), White River National Forest agent Rich Doak noted that when a $10 fee was put in place for vehicles driving to the Maroon Bells, Aspen residents fought a fee for cyclists.

Ads by Google

The Big Brands Are Boring
Ride Something Different & Better. The Devinci Atlas - In Stock Now!
VelorutionCycles.com